Brief History of Museum & Preserve

As early as 2500 B.C. Matinecock Natives occupied a sheltered campsite on the south side of the property, adjacent to what was then a marsh. This was a small seasonal site with fewer than 50 individuals who were primarily hunters and gatherers of wild foods such as shellfish. This area was included in the tract of land purchased in 1668 by Joseph Carpenter of Warwick, Rhode Island. It became part of the Garvie family estate when Dr. Thomas Garvie, a physician and founder of this prominent Long Island family, emigrated here from Scotland in 1803. The land was purchased by Nassau County in 1963. The Museum, which opened on July 4, 1967 specializes in Long Island & NYS geology and LI Native American archaeology along with special exhibits, currently showing, "Seashells...Nature's Inspired Design." Our nature preserve consists of 62 acres with 5 miles of marked trails including a self-guiding trail and trail for the visually impaired. Woodlands of varying ages, meadows, ponds, and 2,000 feet of shoreline along Hempstead Harbor can be explored. Our museum & preserve are known for its rich geological and archaeological history. Trail maps are available at the front entrance and online.
